Suicide Prevention

A person at risk for suicidal behavior most often will show warning signs: depression, previous suicide attempts, recent losses, frequent thoughts about death, and the use of drugs or alcohol. A person planning to attempt suicide may also give verbal hints such as "nothing matters," or "I won't be a problem for you anymore." They may also give away favorite possessions or become suddenly cheerful after a long period of sadness. The impact of youth suicides is far reaching, leaving families, teachers, and students to ask themselves how the suicide could have been prevented. Usually those who attempt suicide have more than one problem. If your child or a friend displays any of these behaviors, you should seek help.

Family, teachers, and other school staff such as guidance counselors, school psychologists, or school social workers are your greatest resource when you need some help. If trusted adults or professionals are not available, encourage your child to contact the National Youth Crisis Hotline at 1-800-442-4673 or 2-1-1 to talk to a person at the local Tampa Bay Crisis Hotline.
